Juan Luis Cebrian (1944) is a Spanish writer and journalist. He is the founder and president of honor of El País, the newspaper he founded as its first editor in 1976 and which today is the most widely circulated and prestigious newspaper in Spanish. It is published by the news, education and entertainment group PRISA, of which Cebrián was Executive Chairperson until January 2018. He has been a member of the Royal Spanish Academy since 1996 and is member of the Supervisory Board of Le Monde. He studied Philosophy at the Universidad Complutense in Madrid and graduated from the Escuela Oficial de Periodismo (Official Journalism School) in Madrid in 1963.

In 1964 he joined the newspaper Pueblo as editor, where he remained until 1967. He was co-founder of the magazine Cuadernos para el Diálogo. In 1968 he became editor of the newspaper Informaciones, of which he was appointed deputy editor-in-chief in 1969. In 1974 he joined RTVE as head of news services at the state television broadcaster.

As a founding editor of El País, Cebrián led the newspaper from its launch in May of 1976 until November of 1988, when he was named editor-in-chief and CEO of the newspaper, as well as CEO of Grupo PRISA. He was also the CEO of Sogecable, PRISA’s TV company, from its establishment in 1989 until 1999. He also served as president of the International Press Institute (IPI). In 2004 he served as President of the Association of Spanish Newspaper Publishers (AEDE). While at the helm of the newspaper El País, Cebrián played a crucial role in the Spanish political transition from dictatorship to democracy.

Over the course of a professional journalistic and executive career spanning 50 years, Cebrián has also emerged as a renowned essayist and speaker, and he is the author of numerous books in the fields of journalism and political sociology, including: “La prensa y la calle”, “La España que bosteza”, “El tamaño del elefante”, “El siglo de las sombras”, “Cartas a un joven periodista”, “La Red” “El futuro no es lo que era” — written with the former Spanish Prime Minister Felipe González — “El fundamentalismo democrático” and “El pianista en el burdel”. His novels include “La Rusa”, “La Isla del Viento”, “La Agonía del Dragón” and “Francomoribundia”. Further literary works have been published in the compilations “Retrato de un Siglo” and “De Madrid... al cielo”, and his essays have been included in books such as “Prensa para la democracia: reto del Siglo XXI” and “Transición Española”. He recently published the first volume of his memoirs, titled Primera Página (Front Page), which cover the crucial period up until 1988 and which saw the foundation and early years of El País and the political transition to democracy in Spain.

He has received numerous prizes in journalism. In January 2014, he was honored with the rank of Grand Officer of the Order of Bernardo O’Higgins, the highest distinction that the Chilean government gives to outstanding foreign citizens, in recognition of his contribution to strengthening ties between both Spain and Chile. That same year he joined the Chilean Academy of Language in recognition of his work to improve and safeguard the Spanish language. Meanwhile, in Washington, he received the First Amendment Award, granted by the Spanish Association of Eisenhower Fellows, for his work in favor of freedom of the press.

Cortés-Monroy joined Nestlé 23 years ago, after working in private practice as in-house counsel at a bank and as regional legal counsel for a United States mining company. It was at the latter that he realised he wanted to expand his horizons beyond Chile. ‘That’s where I fell in love with being an international lawyer and I joined Nestlé with the purpose of becoming an international practitioner,’ he says. ‘They promised after four or five years in the local operation that I would have the chance to join headquarters in Switzerland and develop a career, which is exactly what happened. It was very Swiss, very planned,’ he chuckles. ‘If you look at my CV you’ll see it’s almost textbook from legal counsel, to regional general counsel and then chief legal officer – it’s been a fascinating experience.’

Cortés-Monroy says much of his role is in keeping with the traditional responsibilities of a chief legal officer, acting as legal adviser and counsel to the company’s Chairman, Chief Executive Officer and Board of Directors. He runs a tight ship, comprising 440 lawyers and 300 paralegals and administrative staff. Overseeing such a large team requires a lot of organisation, he says. ‘It’s a bit like a law firm. We have a team of 147 lawyers based in Switzerland and very strong local legal departments. What we don’t have are regional offices, that’s a defining model as we decided to centralise the corporate legal function. This is a paradoxical company as we’re highly decentralised, but in certain areas we’re highly centralised. The corporate legal department is one of these.’

Despite having such a large legal team, Cortés-Monroy says his lawyers work alongside 1,200 law firms worldwide, having made the decision in 2002 to split the group’s legal spend evenly between the internal legal team and external legal counsel. The global panel, which is reviewed every four years, comprises Linklaters, Mayer Brown, White & Case and Eversheds. The panel was reviewed last year and was a very time-intensive process, which is one reason why he enlisted the help of a legal operations manager. ‘She’s not a lawyer, but an industrial engineer who is really strong in processes, systems and finances and is in charge of the running of the Nestlé law firm,’ he says. ‘She was fundamental in making this whole process smooth and easy to handle. I would highly recommend to any legal department of a relatively big size to have a legal operations manager.’

Internally, his team covers a large range of practice areas and is particularly busy with Mergers & Acquisitions and employment issues. Other areas, like e-commerce and digital, have boomed in recent years and he now has eight lawyers dedicated full-time to these practice areas. Not surprisingly, Intellectual Property is another practice area that occupies much of his and his team’s time, particularly when it comes to patents. ‘We like to call it a “health and wellness” company, but there are a lot of borderline pharma businesses which we have that are very patent intensive,’ he says. ‘Then we have our flagship businesses like Nespresso and Nescafé Dolce Gusto. Those patents are an extremely relevant field of law, so at the end of 2016 the Board of Directors decided to entrust legal in building an integrated IP department, so patents have moved from Research & Development to legal.’
Paul has a well-established international corporate practice, representing listed companies, large multinationals and private equity firms. Paul has handled a wide range of Dutch and cross-border public takeovers, private acquisitions and disposals, auctions and joint ventures and regularly advises on corporate governance matters. He has also acted as counsel or arbitrator in numerous ICC, AAA and NAI arbitrations.

Paul is a member of the Netherlands Bar, and has been admitted to the New York and California Bar. He is a former resident partner of De Brauw’s New York office. Paul is a member of the faculty of the Amsterdam Institute of Finance, and Chair of the Law Firm Management Committee Strategy and Finance Working Group of the International Bar Association. He also serves on the Legal Committee of the American Chamber of Commerce in the Netherlands and is included on the list of arbitrators of the Netherlands Arbitration Institute and on the International Panel of Arbitrators of the American Arbitration Association.

Paul has been nominated for ‘Best M&A lawyer of the Netherlands’ several times. Clients say he is ‘highly skilled in corporate governance and private equity work’ (Chambers Europe 2013), ‘valued for his negotiation abilities, he really bridged the gap between the parties’ (Chambers Global 2014), ‘very client focused and an excellent negotiator’ (Legal 500 EMEA 2016), ‘a very good dealmaker, very dedicated and matter-of-fact’ (Chambers Global 2016), ‘a great strategic thinker’ and ‘a very thoughtful adviser’ (Chambers Europe 2017), and ‘remarkable, a calm problem-solver’ (Legal 500 EMEA 2018).

Baron David René James de Rothschild began his business career at Société minière et métallurgique de Peñarroya, one of the family’s international mining businesses headquartered in Paris. He then began training in de Rothschild Frères bank. In 1967 due to French government reform of banking regulations, de Rothschild Frères became Banque Rothschild, a limited-liability company. Following the election to the French Presidency of the socialist government of François Mitterrand in 1981, the new parliament nationalized a number of large companies and banks, including Banque Rothschild.

In 1982, David recreated the bank in Paris after it had been nationalised, with 10 employees housed in the Avenue Matigon. In 1987, joined by his half-brother Edouard, step-brother Count Philippe de Nicolay, and cousin Eric de Rothschild, Baron David created a successor company, Rothschild & Cie Banque. They soon built their new bank into a major competitor in France and continental Europe. In 2003, following the retirement of his English cousin, Sir Evelyn Robert de Rothschild, as head of N M Rothschild & Sons, the UK and French firms merged to become one entity, under one holding company, Paris Orléans. Under the leadership of Baron David, the successful partnership between the French and British family businesses enabled the group to develop a broad geographic footprint and global network, with 3,500 employees operating in 63 offices across 44 countries.

His corporate positions have since included: chairman of N M Rothschild & Sons, chairman of Rothschild Continuation Holdings, Vice Chairman of Rothschild Bank AG, Vice Chairman of the Supervisory Board of Paris Orleans, Senior Partner of Rothschild & Cie Banque, Member of the Supervisory Board of Compagnie Financière Saint-Honore, Member of the Supervisory Board of Compagnie Financière Martin Maurel, Member of the Supervisory Board of De Beers Group, and Member of the Supervisory Board of Groupe Casino.

On 17 April 2018, Rothschild & Co announced the appointment of Alexandre de Rothschild, Baron David’s son, to succeed him as Chairman of Rothschild & Co. At the shareholders’ meeting in May 2018, David de Rothschild became Chairman of the Supervisory Board to replace Eric de Rothschild. In accordance with the succession plan, Alexandre de Rothschild became Executive Chairman of the group.

Outside of his role in the family business, Baron David has served as town mayor for 18 years for the town where the Rothschild’s made their home in Normandy at Château Reux. The town is France’s preeminent horse breeding area and is close to Haras de Meautry, the breeding farm run by his brother Edouard. Baron David also owns a share of the Château Lafite-Rothschild vineyard but is not active in its day-to-day operations.

David de Rothschild succeeded former French minister Simone Veil as president of the French Entente Cordiale Scholarship trust, a Franco-British scholarship programme. He was also President of the Fondation pour la Mémoire de la Shoah. From 1982–2006, Baron David lead the United Jewish Fund (UJF), a federation of about 200 Jewish social, educational, and cultural associations, which his father had created in 1950.

Wai King Ng is the Managing Partner of WongPartnership, and remains active advising clients on M&A and private equity transactions. Wai King spent the better part of September and October 2010 advising Singapore billionaire Peter Lim on his bid to acquire Liverpool Football Club. A long suffering supporter, he was much disappointed when Liverpool was eventually sold to yet another group of American owners.

Working on the two largest M&A transactions in Singapore’s corporate history, Wai King headed the team in advising:

TCC Assets and Thai Beverage Public Company Limited (a company listed on the Singapore Exchange) on a successful takeover offer for Fraser & Neave, Limited (“F&N”), fending off a competing offer by another party. The offer valued F&N at approximately S$13.8 billion and the transaction was awarded “M&A Deal of the Year” for both South East Asia and Singapore, as well as “SE Asia Deal of the Year” at the ALB SE Asia Law Awards 2014; and “Best M&A Deal” at the IFLR Asia Awards 2014. (more recently in July 2017) the Nesta consortium as offeror in the proposed scheme of arrangement to acquire Global Logistics Properties Ltd. (“GLP”), a transaction which values GLP at S$16 billion. This is the largest announced public M&A transaction in Singapore and largest private equity-led transaction in Asia.

Other transactions of significance that he has been involved in include representing Blackstone in the acquisition of Croesus Retail Trust (the first scheme of arrangement of a business trust in Singapore); CWT and its major selling shareholders in the general offer by HNA Group for all the shares in CWT; Temasek in the sale to SingTel of $2.47 billion worth of shares in InTouch (a Thai telco) and Bharti (an Indian telco); SMRT Corporation in the privatisation by Temasek Holdings via a scheme of arrangement; the transition of SMRT Trains to a new licence to be granted by the Land Transport Authority of Singapore (“LTA”) to operate the North-South, East-West line and Circle line mass rapid transit systems and the Bukit Panjang light rail transit system under the new rail financing framework, and the transfer of ownership of the rail operating assets, including trains and signalling systems to the LTA; Tata Communications as Singapore counsel in the sale of a 74% stake in its data centre business in India and Singapore to ST Telemedia Global Data Centres; JTC Corporation, a Singapore government statutory body, in the merger with Temasek Holdings Limited of four of their operating subsidiaries; and Temasek Holdings (Private) Limited in the partnership with the Singapore Tourism Board in a proposed project to rejuvenate Mandai, a development which consists of the Singapore Zoo, Night Safari and River Safari.

In addition, Wai King has an active private equity practice.
After five years as an internal lawyer for an American multinational group, he joined Erede Bianchi Giliberti in 1982 and is a partner of BonelliErede since its foundation.

He was president of the BonelliErede Council from 2001 to 2007 and currently continues to be a member. His significant experience in the luxury sector is recognized by the market and over the years has assisted the major international groups, designers and private equity funds in many major operations conducted in Italy.

He has frequently assisted financial sponsors and industrial operators regarding investments in industrial companies in very different sectors (automotive, motorcycles, components in general, photovoltaics, telecommunications, etc.).

Acknowledgments
It is mentioned by the international legal guides Chambers & Partners and The Legal 500 EMEA as the top expert in Italy in the field of company law, mergers and acquisitions and private equity.

Robin Panovka has been a partner at Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz since 1993, focusing on M&A, strategic transactions and corporate governance in the United States and in cross-border transactions.

Robin is a founding director of the International Institute for the Study of Cross-Border M&A (XBMA), a joint venture among Peking University, Cambridge and NYU. He advises regularly on cross-border M&A matters, counseling both foreign acquirers of U.S. businesses and U.S. companies making acquisitions abroad.

Robin has been named one of the Lawdragon 500 Leading Lawyers in the U.S., and is consistently ranked as one of the leading M&A and REIT lawyers by Chambers, Legal 500, Who’s Who Legal and similar publications. He has been featured in a number of publications for his leadership in these fields, including Lawdragon Magazine and as an American Lawyer “Dealmaker”, and in 2015 received New York University’s Urban Leadership Award.

He co-chairs the firm’s top-ranked Real Estate and REIT M&A groups, which are consistently at the forefront of major transactions in the public REIT, real estate, hospitality and gaming industries, including many of the largest and most complex mergers, buyouts, takeovers and spinoffs over the last decade. He also advises on city-building and major development projects, including the redevelopment of the World Trade Center in Manhattan.

He is the co-author of “REITs: Mergers and Acquisitions,” a leading treatise published by Law Journal Press, and co-editor of the global “Real Estate M&A and Private Equity Review.” He is co-chair of the NYU REIT Center and has served as an adjunct professor at Columbia Business and Law Schools and in NYU’s Masters in Real Estate Program. He lectures frequently, including chairing annual conferences for the NYU REIT Center, Practising Law Institute and XBMA. He is also active on a number of educational and non-profit boards, including the boards of Duke Law School and NYU’s Real Estate Institute; is a fellow of the American Bar Foundation and the American College of Real Estate Lawyers; and serves on the Cornell University Council.

Robin was heavily involved in the redevelopment of the World Trade Center for more than a decade following its destruction on September 11, 2001, including negotiating the master plan and “footprint swap” which paved the way to rebuilding, as chronicled in the Cornell Real Estate Review, American Lawyer Magazine and other publications.

He holds degrees from Cornell University and Duke Law School. He grew up in South Africa and Israel and currently lives in Manhattan.

Dr. David E. Tadmor is the co-chairman and co-managing partner of Tadmor & Co. Yuval Levy & Co. along with Opher Levy.

Dr. David E. Tadmor’s practice includes the representation of many leading multinational clients in a large variety of industries, as well as many of Israel’s largest industrial companies, holding companies, and financial institutions.

David is recognized as a leading expert in the area of competition law and regulation. He served as the Director General of the Israel Antitrust Authority (IAA) between 1997 and 2001. During his time in office, the IAA tripled in size, legislative amendments were introduced, and much of the foundation for Israel’s competition law and enforcement policies was laid. As Director General, David introduced the IAA to the competition committee of the OECD, and was also the driving force behind the cooperation agreement between the United States and Israel in the area of competition.

As a leading lawyer in the area of government regulations, David has represented major clients before governmental bodies and legislative committees in many of Israel’s major regulatory and legislative reforms. David also has more than 20 years of experience in the area of mergers and acquisitions. He was a senior partner at Caspi & Co., a leading mergers and acquisition firm in Tel Aviv, and a corporate attorney with the New York law firm of Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz from 1988 to 1993.

David was an adjunct professor at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem (The Law and Practice of Privatizations), the Interdisciplinary Center (Antitrust Law), and Tel Aviv University School of Law (Telecommunications Law, Antitrust Law, and Corporate Law). He now co-teaches a course in competition and intellectual property law at the Tel Aviv University School of Law.

David is also an accomplished photographer (www.tadmor-photo.com).

Qinghua XU is a partner at EY based in Paris where she leads EY’s Chinese Overseas Investment Network (COIN) cross Europe advising Chinese companies investing and expanding into this region.

Qinghua and her COIN team bring the East and the West together by effectively bridging the cultural, regulatory and communication gaps and working closely with C-suite business leaders from both Europe and China to help formulate and implement their international business development strategies, thanks to her in-depth knowledge of the two regions of the world and her 18 years of international professional service experience.

Qinghua is particularly active since recent years in advising Chinese companies to achieve their operational expansions/transformations in Europe via acquisitions.

Her success in serving Chinese investors in Europe, also lies in her capacities to have accesses to and work closely with local companies and European governments to “educate” them on China and objectively and tactfully present a balanced picture of Chinese companies’ hard power as well as soft power, as the latter is often inadequately expressed and/or misperceived, thus posing as a hurdle to their development.

In this regard, Qinghua served as special advisor to the French Presidency on China affaires from 2009 to 2011, currently acts as an advisor to several European and African governments to assist them in formulating and promoting competitive policies to attract Chinese investments into those countries.

Qinghua is trilingual in Chinese, English and French and is a member of the New York Bar.
