New York University
Stern School of Business

NYU Pollack Center for Law & Business

A joint venture of the NYU School of Law and the
Stern School of Business

Located in downtown New York City's Greenwich Village, New York University Stern School of Business is a premiere management education research institution whose more than 200 full-time faculty are conducting innovative research that is shaping the future of global business. Stern's community of academic scholars, students and alumni fosters a collaborative environment of knowledge creation and dissemination, in which the School aims to lead the dialogue between what is happening in the world of business and its impact on society.

Stern is recognized as a leader in research productivity, furthering the field across academic disciplines and the practice of business globally. Stern faculty are recognized as thought-leaders in their respective fields, consulting with corporations around the world, authoring widely-used textbooks, and influencing policy through Congressional testimony and work with international and national governmental and regulatory agencies. Faculty work cross-functionally through their engagement in seven research centers, including the NYU Pollack Center for Law and Business, a venture between Stern and NYU School of Law dedicated to enhancing an interdisciplinary legal and business education for the academic community, as well as for experienced legal and business practitioners.

Stern offers a broad portfolio of academic programs at the graduate and undergraduate levels, as well as Executive Education programs that enable high potential and senior executives to lead organizational change at their respective organizations. Stern also partners with other NYU schools, as well as leading educational institutions around the world, to offer joint degree programs.

Stern consistently admits one of the highest percentages of underrepresented groups and women to its full-time MBA program among top business schools, and approximately one-third of its full-time MBA class hails from outside the U.S.

Upon graduation, students become a member of the global network of more than 75,000 alumni who work in more than 100 countries in almost every sector.

Guanghua School of Management Beijing, China

The predecessor of the Guanghua School of Management was founded in 1985 and then merged with the Centre of Management Science in December 1994. In the same year, the School received a major donation from the Guanghua Education Foundation in Hong Kong and renamed the Guanghua School of Management.

Just as China is in a dynamic state of change, the School finds itself in the position of meeting the future challenges facing the world economies. Through its educational initiatives, Guanghua seeks to enable its graduates to develop and implement responsible and innovative successful business solutions.

Staffed by 100 full-time faculty members, Guanghua offers rigorous doctoral research, master programs (including MBA and EMBA), and undergraduate programs. It provides customized in house training for large multinational corporations and Chinese companies. Because of its national and international reputation, Guanghua is able to attract the most talented applicants nationwide and is able to place its graduates successfully in large business corporations, governmental agencies, and academic and non-profit institutions.

Guanghua's faculty is active at the forefront of business and social change. They participate frequently in the government's policy-making process and serve as advisers both to Chinese and to foreign businesses. Several well-known reform proposals in China, such as dual-track pricing and the corporatization of state sectors were initiated by our faculty. Their extensive academic research allows them to develop original thinking and to know how to apply their insights to business, economic, and social challenges in China.

Guanghua has extensive collaboration and exchange programs with leading international institutions such as the Kellogg Graduate School of Management of Northwestern University, INSEAD, ESSEC, the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania, the Fuqua School of Management at Duke University, the Stern School of Business at New York University, the Krannert School of Management at Purdue University, and the Schulich School of Business at York University.

With the launching of an MBA program in Shenzhen and an international MBA program on the Beijing campus in 2000, Guanghua continues to expand its network worldwide.

The University of Cambridge

Celebrating its 800th anniversary in 2009, the University of Cambridge is a confederation of Colleges, Faculties and other institutions. The University functions with a relatively small central administration, and with central bodies consisting of, and mainly elected by, the current academic personnel of the Faculties and Colleges. A large part of Cambridge's day-to-day administration is carried out by teaching staff on behalf of their colleagues, and the University's governmental structure is democratic.

The Colleges

Each of the thirty-one Colleges is an autonomous corporation and their internal procedures vary. Like the University, each College is governed by its own statutes and regulations. The elected or appointed Head of a College may be termed Master, President, Principal, Mistress, Provost, or Warden. The Governing Body is made up of the Head and some or all of the Fellows – the elected senior members of the College whose primary duty is teaching, administration or research.

Colleges are free to select their own students, subject to some minimum educational requirements imposed by the University. Three admit only women; most admit both undergraduate and postgraduate students.

The pivots of the College system are the Tutors, the College officers responsible for the pastoral care of students; the Directors of Studies, who have specific responsibilities in relation to the courses of study and academic progress of their students; and the Supervisors, who carry out individual and small-group teaching which complements the lectures and practical classes organised by the University. Other College officers include Bursars, who are responsible for finance and buildings and Chaplains, whose concern is spiritual welfare.

Links with the government of the University are ensured through membership of the Council and the Finance Committee which both include places reserved for College representatives. The working of the dual system is further facilitated by the fact that many teaching Fellows of Colleges also hold University teaching appointments, and many University teachers are also Fellows of Colleges.

CAMBRIDGE
Judge Business School

Cambridge Judge Business School
University of Cambridge

A great business school at the heart of Cambridge University, advancing knowledge and leadership through people who leave a mark on the world.

Cambridge Judge Business School in its first incarnation as Judge Institute of Management Studies was created in 1990 around a small group of faculty and students in Engineering. In 1991 generous benefactions from Sir Paul and Lady Judge and the Monument Trust provided the means for the refurbishment and extension of the Old Addenbrookes Hospital which was first established on this site in 1766. The new building and Sandra Dawson as our new director were both inaugurated in August 1995. The school has grown quickly in size and reputation and is now a flourishing multi-national, multi-disciplinary community of students and faculty. Professor Arnoud De Meyer succeeded Sandra Dawson as Director in 2006. Alongside Executive Education, Cambridge Judge Business School offers graduate programmes leading to the MBA, MPhil and PhD degrees, and a final year programme for undergraduates in Management Studies. Faculty also contribute to degrees in Engineering, economics and mathematics.
